JEWISH EDUCATION IN TORONTO

The Toronto Talmud Torah is one of the major Jewish institutions in the city. For one thing, it represents a very considerable financial investment on the part of the community, and it is also a commitment which will challenge a great deal of attention for many years to come. Functionally, it is of prime importance, professing as it does to deal with the fundamental problem of Jewish education.

Generally speaking, education is a process of moulding individuals to fit into the scheme of society and the environment, and equipping them to perpetuate the categories of thinking and living which they find in force around them. Jewish education would have to serve the purpose of fitting the raw Jewish material into the scheme of Jewish life, and render it capable of perpetuating the motif of Jewish group existence.

In the Jewish settlements of Lithuania or Galicia, Jewish life was a continuous round of religious worship and devotion. Material problems were of secondary importance. The educational system in those communities was therefore designed to train the youth in the requirements of the full religious life. The educational minimum represented the minimum of religious preparedness.

In American Jewish life the bulk of the content of Jewishism, which was the product of centuries of intensive Jewish living, has been frittered away. The Jewish group existence has not as yet evolved any definite characteristics. The Jewish environment has not acquired any positive features. Jewdom is groping in the dark. It may hit upon a path which will lead to a Jewish future. Or it may lose itself in the complexities of American life, and become absorbed in the environment.

In the midst of this prevailing uncertainty it is therefore difficult to apply the general principle of education to the problem of the Jewish education of the Jewish youth. If the function of education is to initiate the youth into the meaning and purposes of the Jewish environment, the question must first be determined as to what constitutes the meaning and purposes of the Jewish environment. If the youth is to perpetuate the categories of American Jewish life, an understanding must first be reached as to what these categories are. It is impossible to teach that which is unknown. It is impossible even to attempt to work out a minimum where no standard and no sense of proportion exist.

The tendency has been observed among parents to make use in this country of the principles and standards of education which were employed in Lithuanian or Galician Jewish communities. Methods in vogue there were transplanted bodily to America, and forcibly applied to the treatment of our youth. The general assumption was made that Jewish society, say in Toronto, was no different in character from Jewish society, say, in Kovno. The ruling motives were the same. The environmental contacts and demands were similar. The youth was in all respects composed of the same clay, conditioned by similar sets of social force. The only difference recognized was that in the time allowance available for Jewish education. The same ideals of education and the same types of teachers were employed in Toronto (and in all American cities) as were employed in Kovno or Cracow. Kovno or Cracow Jews who may have had excellent qualifications for teaching Jewish children in Lithuania or Galicia the rudiments of religious life, but who had no knowledge of the conditions of American Jewish life, or of the psychology of American Jewish children, were entrusted with the responsibility of influencing and moulding our youth. It was only a case of giving minimum doses. They fed minimum doses of a solid diet to constitutions that required maximum doses of a liquid diet.

We are familiar with the type of part-time teachers who divided their time between junk salvaging and serving Judaism. They generally knew as much about the latter vocation as about the former, and their success in their commercial pursuits could be gauged by the fact that they had to teach to get along in life. These men almost invariably managed to implant in the hearts of their victims a hatred for all things pertaining to Hebrew studies. The Jewish schools were manned by a personnel only slightly better than the private tutors. Education was a travesty. Neither the parents nor the teachers had any conception of what they were about. The youth submitted with more or less grace until their thirteenth year when their liberation would take place.

There are sections of the Jewish community which have achieved a formulation of their understanding of the trend of Jewish life in America. The nationalist-radical elements have worked out a conception of the significance of Jewish existence. And on the basis of their ideology they reared a system of Jewish education which harmonizes with the principles which operate in their environment. The Jewish Workmen's Circle (Arbeiter Ring) and the National Labour Alliance (Nationaler Arbeiter Verband) each have a chain of schools where the instruction is a pedagogical application of their ideas of the meaning and destiny of Jewish life.

Jewish schools to be effective must represent a definite point of view in Jewish life. The moulding of the children should be done after a certain pattern. And the pattern must be one in harmony with the conditions of our environment.

Of course, as we said before, the characteristic lines of our group life are not as yet clearly set out. For this reason our educationalists have a dual task to perform. They must deal not only with the technical problems of pedagogy but they must also work out for themselves some sort of conception of the meaning of American Jewish life generally as a guide for their educational effort

The question presents itself with regard to the Toronto situation: Do the administrators of our local institution—with the magnificent building, and excellent facilities at their disposal—realize the implications of the responsibility which they are assuming? Do they appreciate that Jewish education in America involves an understanding of the general contour of Jewish life as a basis for the formulation of educational ideals? Do they realize the simple proposition that American Jewish children are habituated to a set of conditions entirely different from these which govern child life in Poland or Galicia, and present educational problems of a completely dissimilar character?

An editorial in the New York World:

"This much can be said for Mr. Ford: that when he realized the absurdity of the campaign which has been waged against the Jews by the Dearborn Independent he admitted his error publicly and handsomely. It is fair to say, however, that Mr. Ford's amazing unfamiliarity with what his own magazine has been doing all these years and his willingness to attempt to avoid responsibility at the expense of his subordinates are anything but impressive."

F. P. A. in the World:

"Well, as we understand the situation, what Mr. Henry Ford wants to say, paraphrasing Irving Berlin, is:

Against my wishes,
I once was risches.*

*Anti-Semitic.

Then here's to the village of Dearborn,
A town of harmonious chords,
Where the Fords are now fond of the Levys,
And the Levys are fond of the Fords."

Once upon a time (rumour has it), long, long ago, dears, there lived an ardent Zionist who could listen carefully to honest criticism about the cause, what was going on in Palestine and even about the present administration. This is just hearsay, though. There is no foundation in fact for the story and perhaps the literal-minded will be unwilling to believe it. And anyway that ardent Zionist died, so the story goes. He died, very dead. Worse, he left no heirs. So, when A. B. B., writing in the REVIEW, in the year 5687, tells his fellow-Zionists what is wrong with their organization and what should be done about this and that, he goes unappreciated and is regarded as a trouble-maker and a fault-finder instead of a valuable asset. Sad. There are so many back-scratchers and boot-lickers and me-too-ers and yes-yessers in this world and so few valuable assets, alas! A man should always say what's sweet or he will never be pointed to with pride. A man should dip his pen in honey and save the people the trouble of reading him. Then there would never be a rustle among the people who threaten to cancel their subscriptions. Oh, lovely compliment! What more could a paper ask in recognition of its influence than that people threaten to cancel, the more the better? There is a certain lady in Toronto who belongs to that chaste, small company who get the REVIEW free, as a gift, at the request of a staff member of the paper. She is no lineal descendant of that former ardent Zionist, either. And she is going to "cancel," too!

News from Antwerp says that thousands of Jewish workers are among those effected by the critical situation in the diamond industry. By a decision of the Employer's Association, in agreement with the Worker's Syndicate, work in the whole industry was stopped July 11 in protest against the South African Senate's bill limiting the alluvial diamond production. For the diamond magnates have succeeded in inducing the government in South Africa to limit the production of diamonds by law. A few years ago these millionaires controlled the mines and strictly limited the output. It seemed that diamonds would be safe forever against becoming cheap. But troubles came to the diamond magnates. First, diamonds were discovered in German Southwest Africa and soon one-fifth of the diamonds of the world came from there. (However, the British Empire annexed this region and it entered the combine.) At the close of the war, then, the forced sale of diamonds by the aristocracy of Russia, Germany and Austria was so heavy that many South African mines had to shut down as the world market went down under that blow. Economic depression in America and Europe brought other troubles and then great alluvial deposits of diamonds were found in South Africa where an adventurer with a mere spade could dig up carats.

The trouble with diamonds is that the saturation point of consumption is reached by about five and a half million carats production a year. They don't wear out in the kind, sympathetic-to-producers way velvets and silks, gold and silver or even platinum have. Diamond anklets have been worn by certain ladies to be sure, but, for the most part, more than a few modest gauds run foul of good taste. In keeping with the love of lavish expense and show of this age diamond and platinum wedding rings have crowded out somewhat the simple gold band. The bigger the diamond engagement ring the better the engagement; a diamond wrist watch is more gorgeous than a plain one and in some sets a diamond bar pin is part of the daily uniform, like knees for instance. But, generally speaking, too much is too much for all that the diamond magnates would like to encourage, most likely, in the way of diamond safety pins and for all that some women do try to make walking jewelry stores of themselves. As long as the diamond magnates can talk, diamonds will not be cheap unless synthetic manufacture some day makes them so. If diamond production had not been limited by the South African Senate perhaps the producers would have had to start a get-engaged-very-often campaign or inaugurate a buy-a-diamond-stomacher-week. It is even better that several thousand persons should be out of work in protest.

Harris, brother of the bride; Mrs. M. Oppenheim and daughter, Miss E. Waldman, cousins of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. D. Jones returned from Boston. Mrs. J. C. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Queen Street, Kingston, of Miss Clara Oberndorffer and J. E. Browne, of Ottawa. The corners of the drawing room were banked with palms, lights showing among the sprays. Supper tables, arranged in the form of a T, were decked with white roses, lilies-of-the-valley and smilax. The wedding cake rested on a centre piece of white satin wrought in silver tissue. The bride wore white crepe de chine over taffeta and her hand-embroidered tulle veil was fastened up with lilies-of-the-valley, a pearl brooch as ornament. The bridesmaid, Miss Oberndorffer, wore a gown of grey eolienne with hand-embroidered medallions of grey lace, the transparent yoke being white, and she carried pink roses. Max Myer, of New York, the bride's cousin, was best man. The family presented the bride and groom with several chests of silver. The bride's travelling gown was of navy blue zibeline. The couple went to Montreal and Quebec. In Westmount Hall, Lillian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Sessenwein, married Bernard Robbins, of New York. Mrs. Samuel Goltman and Miss Reba Goltman went to spend the summer at Manor Richelieu, Murray Bay.

GOOD NAME IS DISPUTED

For quite a long time the white man has taken it for granted that the word "Muskoka" was derived from the name of the famous Indian doctor or conjurer Misquedoh; but one who takes as his authority the "Atlas," written by W. E. Hamilton, Esq., has disputed this through the columns of the press and claims that "as Amerigo filched the honour of sponsorship of this continent from Columbus, so the crafty conqueror Misquedoh (Clear Sky) has been chronicled as the god-father of Muskoka, in place of the undaunted chieftain Mesqua Ukee."

To those who know it, however, the Muskoka district will always be the land of "clear skies" and sparkling waters, and to these, as to others, who would this year make their first acquaintance with this most glorious and convenient holiday resort district, the Canadian Pacific Railway offers a very complete service. Write W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent in Toronto, or ask any agent for particulars and handsomely illustrated booklets and folders.

SMALL MAJORITY FOR MASARYK

Thomas Masaryk, the founder of the Czechoslovak Republic, and its president since 1915, was re-elected to the Presidency by a majority of only twenty-one votes. The Communists and the Fascisti, as well as several other groups voted against him and it was said that the election was a tribute to the man rather than to the policies for which he stands. It was also rumoured that his friendship toward the Jews, especially evinced during his recent visit to Palestine, turned against him the clerical vote. Although seventy-seven years of age, Professor Masaryk is still vigorous and enthusiastic.

Mr. Gruenwold, a Jewish lawyer of Tel Aviv, was appointed Czechoslovakian Vice-Consul for the district of Jaffa.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

JEWISH ACTIVITIES IN ENGLAND

The summer months bring to England many tourists, and it is regarded an appropriate time for holding conventions and meetings of an international nature, although the native population is often absent from these gatherings, preferring the seashore or country retreat to sweltering in the hot cities and listening to reports and long discussions. The outstanding conference held in London recently is that of the Jewish Association for the Protection of Girls and Women, presided over by Dr. C. G. Montefiore. This was held about the same time that the general International Congress for the Suppression of the Traffic in Women and Children, so that many of the delegates could attend the sessions of both these related institutions. The splendid work done by the Jewish organization in South America received due recognition at both these conferences while the inadequacy of that work was felt by all delegates. The menace of the white slave traffic became much greater in Eastern Europe, due to economic and changed political conditions. It was brought out by several speakers that while this was not distinctly a Jewish question, there were phases of the problem that require solution at the hands of rabbis and ecclesiastical authorities. Chief among these is the question of Agunah, which is so vexing Eastern Europe. Another cause is the secret marriage, which should be abolished, if possible. Miss Pappenheim expressed the hope that a new R. Gershom would arise now and break the chains of the Agunah. Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, of New York, related the splendid work which the Council of Jewish Women in America has been doing which resulted in considerably reducing prostitution in the large cities of America.

Last week the annual conference of Anglo-Jewish Preachers was held in London. According to the published programme, the rabbis were to be lavishly entertained by the Chief Rabbi, Mr. Lionel de Rothschild, and at some communal functions. The sessions were to be devoted mainly to the discussion of theoretic problems, relating to Judaism and the Jews, such as "Jewish Theology from the Standpoint of To-day," "The Sermon," "The Minister as a Student," "Yeshibah and University" and similar topics. In a paper entitled "The Sabbath Problem," it is possible that some practical recommendations were made.

Rabbi Raffalowitch, the representative of the ICA in Brazil, presented a report to the Anglo-Jewish Association, in which he pictured the possibilities open in that country for the establishment of a strong Jewish community. He was, however, very emphatic regarding the need of aiding the new settlers there to organize communal Jewish institutions, otherwise the population will drift and may become a menace to world Jewry. There are no synagogues as yet in Brazil, although there is a movement to erect one in Rio de Janeiro.

Following the stand taken by Mr. Louis Marshall and the Grand Rabbin, or France, the Joint Foreign Committee also decided to oppose the conference on Jewish rights, which is expected to convene in Zurich next month.

The International Conference of Fellowship of Faiths which opened yesterday in London, will have the former Hacham, Dr. Moses Gaster, as one of the principal speakers on the programme.

The heated contest between Mr. Joseph Cowen and Mr. Philip Guedalla for the office of President of the Zionist Federation of England, resulted in the choice of the latter to continue in office. The interest in the elections is being continued now when delegates to the Zionist Congress that will be held in Basle at the end of August are being chosen.

Dr. M. Hyamson, of New York, is spending part of his vacation in London and has taken part in several gatherings while there. He also preached in several synagogues during his stay in London, his former home town.

Madam Donalda on Visit to Toronto

Madame Pauline Donalda, the Canadian prima donna, who has achieved success in Paris, New York, London, England and other metropolitan centres of Europe, is spending the summer in her own land and was in Toronto. She is a native of Montreal, and will spend the greater part of her time with her parents before re-opening her studio in the autumn. Madame Donalda's stage name was derived from the late Lord Strathcona's personal name, Donald, which she adopted after winning his prize at the Royal Victoria College, Montreal. She is planning a tour of Canada and the United States next year. When interviewed, Madame Donalda commented upon "hard work" as the great secret of success. Debutante singers who wish to study abroad should have this idea impressed upon them, she said. They should not expect to sing arias before they had mastered exercises, and they should realize that they must study and not spend their time gadding about Paris.

Madame Donalda

"One thing I insist on is their taking part in 'ensemble' so that when they do get before the public and have to sing with a tenor or baritone, they are able to do it successfully—they are forearmed," she said.

The public auditions which Madame Donalda holds for her pupils each season in Paris have attracted notable figures in the musical world. She has been made a member of the Committee of Vocal Congress, recently organized in Paris among the musical instructors for furthering the ethics of music, and one of her fellow-members is the noted Saligniac. She has been awarded by the French Government, the purple rosette of Officier de l'Instruction Publique.

Madame Donalda has twenty-five pupils in Paris, three of whom were awarded the diploma of the Union Professionelle des Maitres du Chant Français this season—Madame Lucille Argers-Delage, of Quebec, Miss Isobel Lamond, a Scotch girl, and Miss Rosa Mostovoy. Miss Lamond is believed to be a coming singer of great note, and will give classical concerts at Vichy in September. She has been engaged for the Conservatoire classical concerts next winter by Phillippe Gaubert.

Madame Donalda has been the guest of her brother, Lyon Lightstone.

TO REDUCE JEWISH REPRESENTATION IN POLISH SEIM

The agitation to reduce the number of deputies and senators in the Polish legislative body, which has proceeded for some time, has now assumed definite form in the recommendations presented by the Administrative Committee of the Seim. The main features of the proposed new ordinance tend to reduce the number of deputies from 444 to 333 and the number of senators from 412 to 309. In the plan the number of representatives from territories inhabited mainly by minority peoples has been considerably curtailed, while the districts in which the Polish element predominates were permitted to have the same number of candidates as before. The move is very plainly that of the Polish Nationalists who seek to make the Seim representative of the Polish majority in order to reduce the influence of the minorities to a minimum. The Jewish Club voiced a strong protest against this attempt, declaring it to be unconstitutional and likely to intensify the friction existing among the various elements of the population.

"Der Yud," the only orthodox daily Jewish paper in Poland, suspended publication for lack of funds.

DIRECTOR HOLLAENDER WANTS NATION, NOT RACE TO DECIDE QUOTA

"We will press our rights to be regarded as citizens of the country to which we belong," Dr. Ludwig Hollaeneder, director of the Central Union of German citizens of the Jewish Religion, declared at Berlin, on July 18, with reference to the organization's protest against United States immigration rules.

It was announced several days ago that a protest would be filed with the Department of State against the immigration rule requiring immigrants of Jewish blood to designate themselves Hebrews in filling out forms, regardless of their nationality. The Central Union takes care of the interests of more than 300,000 German Jews.

"In every respect we are full and worthy Germans, which gives us justification for rejecting any attempts to jeopardize our equality," he said. "The regulation of the American immigration law demanding that the question 'race or people?' be answered with 'Hebrew,' we regard as an unfriendly act.

"We are always willing to term ourselves as belonging to the Jewish race, of which we are proud. But the designation of Jewish nationality we reject decisively. We know only one nationality—German—and refuse to be made members of any other nation."

Israel Levi, the Chief Rabbi of France, issued a statement opposing the contemplated conference of the Committee of Jewish Delegations and the American Jewish Congress. It will be remembered that Mr. Louis Marshall likewise opposed the convening of this conference.

A Jewish engineer of Vienna, named Louis Weissglass, has discovered a new system of wireless photography, which, it is said, will make it a cheap commercial proposition.
